Topic- Discuss Sukumar Ray's social critique achieved under the garb of nonsense rhyme in Abol Tabol

Nonsense poetry, in Western literature, has had a long and gradual evolution from the early 13th century to its maturity in the 19th century in the works of Edward Lear and Lewis Carroll. Literary nonsense, as a subgenre of children's literature, can operate at different levels. Scholars argue that literary nonsense is an interrogation of reality with children's literature being a tool of socialization, where nonsense exists for the sake of questioning the sense. It is a way of upsetting reality for the purpose of interrogating it. In India, children's literature through its subgenre of literary nonsense largely implies colonial undertones to expose the sociopolitical scenario of the colonial times, which turns out to be the most feasible form of camouflaging the protest against the colonial rule and exposure of the pseudo bourgeoisie Babu culture. In Bengali literature, Sukumar Ray's Abol Tabol, translated by Satyajit Ray himself, stands as an immortal work of nonsense literature with an inclusive wit and vivid imagination. The presence of absurd and eccentric characters unobtrusively offers to the adult reader a parodic exposure to the socio-political issues of the time, particularly in the light of the colonial ideology and the strong resistance against it in the early 20th century. The poems illustrate the futility of human endeavour and the scorn it causes in the process in a comedic deliberation including an oblique satire, it becomes a masterpiece amongst the children's literature (literary nonsense) of the time, thus agreeing with the opinion of the 17th-century nonsense poet, John Taylor, who observed "For nonsense is rebellion and thy writing is nothing but rebellious, warres inciting." Although Trailokyanath Mukherjee had given his Bengali readers comedic aspects in his creation before Sukumar Ray, and Annadashankar Ray as well as Premendra Mitra had made their imprint in the post-Ray literary realm, they lacked Sukumar Ray's incisive sight into parodying the contemporary colonial culture and the deceit in it. Sukumar Ray grabbed on what Trailokyanath left unfinished, satirising the Babu culture imposed on the rising middle class by British imperialists and eventually by the colonisers themselves. In this way, his nonsense poetry becomes laden with anti-colonial ideas that float around in a shimmering haze beneath the garb of an apparently innocent nonsense poem. Ray, being interested in emphasising anti-colonial and educational techniques, likely authored children's literature in order to generate critical consciousness, particularly through questioning the function of reason.

Sukumar Ray's immortal creation Abol Tabol, an anthology of nonsense rhymes, translated by Satyajit Ray into English, which consists of 46 titled and 7 untitled short rhymes falling under the category of literary nonsense. Studies on Abol Tabol provide a clearer picture of Sukumar Ray's techniques in employing certain concepts and themes that add to the charisma of the masterpiece. Colonial India in Children's Literature by Supriya Goswami assesses the prevalence of the colonial influences in children's literature by several authors over a long span of time, which includes Sukumar Ray's Abol Tabol. This supports the fact that nonsense literature, as a sub-genre of children's literature, have always been the first pick for such satirical expressions. A larger detail about children's literature and its area of representation has been explored in Peter Hunt's book Understanding Children's Literature, which provides a wide range of array about the various aspects of children's literature, and addressed the theoretical questions and the most important approaches to the field. All the authors in this book share their implicit belief of children's literature, which is worth reading and pondering for the adults. Since Abol Tabol is concerned with the white's powerful subjugation and treatment of the Indians and the protest against it, a lot about such issues can be learned from Donnarae MacCann's book The White Supremacy in Children's Literature, which blends the literary, political, personal and institutional history to show the range of white supremacist ideology. This study reveals that adult and child cultures overlap in parallel with how books for adults, schools, churches and government agencies similarly embrace black identity, culture and intelligence shows that many children's stories have political, social and literary contexts. This book shows how the link between the socialization of children in the 19th century and their conservative tendencies predicted the neglect of social justice in American welfare policy in the 20th century. The Tenth Rasa: An Anthology of Indian nonsense by Michael Heyman provides the idea of the spirit of whimsy which is employed effectively in Ray's poems. This wonderful collection of poetry and prose has been expertly translated from seventeen languages of India. The writers create doorways to wonderfully creative worlds filled by unusual characters and magical animals, where only gibberish makes perfect sense. The tremendously hilarious compilations amuses the readers from start to finish, cracking with humour, wordplay and wild rhymes, and frequently revelling in utter nonsense. Other than this, Asmita Mukherjee's work To Laugh or not to laugh: An analysis of humour in Sukumar Ray's Abol Tabol provides clarity over the elements of parody, satire and other nonsensical elements that build up the inconclusiveness and linguistic play, enabling the poems to be enjoyed as a perfect example of 'nonsense'. Shinjini Sarkar's Sukumar Ray: The Power of words examines the politics of the time of Ray, which tried to parody the colonial dominance and the rising middle class that was growing at the moment. In similar context, the growth of nationalism through the concept of childhood in Indian literature has been studied by Sreemoyee Dasgupta in her Phd thesis paper Nationalism, Genre and Childhood in Colonial Indian Children's literature. All of these vividly puts forward a sneak peek into Ray's world of nonsense, and his methodology of implying tools of literary nonsense to portray severe ideas and notions.

Write an essay on the role and significance of Captain Haddock in 'Tintin in Tibet'

Abstract

Tintin in Tibet was first published in Tintin magazine in the autumn of 1959. A passenger plane travelling to Europe, crashes into the Himalayas. It turns out that Tintin's young Chinese friend Chang was on board the aircraft. Tintin in Tibet (1960) is a story of pure friendship, without any of the usual villains: a tale of Tintin's desperate search to find his friend. The unusual narrative, which is much more introverted than those of other books in the Tintin series, tells the story that faith and hope are able to conquer all obstacles, and that pre-conceived judgements of others - in this case in regard to the yeti - are the fruit of ignorance.

Introduction

The book starts with Tintin holidaying in a resort in the French Alps along with Captain Haddock, Professor Calculus and Snowy. He gets a vision where he sees his friend Chang uttering his name for help. Later, after reading about a plane crash in the Himalayas and getting a letter from Chang, Tintin realises that Chang is indeed in danger as he was in that plane. Tintin rushes to help his friend and at last with the help of monks and local sherpas, he manages to rescue his friend.

> As a Popular Literature.

The story is complete and has an introduction, main action and culmination. Hence, from a cursory reading we can say Tintin In Tibet is a graphic novel. But there is more to unravel. What Tintin fights is his own fear, hesitations and the cruel environment. This makes Tintin In Tibet a distinguished story. The plot, thus, involves introspection, faith, power of friendship, death and even spirituality. We see his faith in his intuitions. However, the story lacks a subplot. It is rather

Abel Tadol takes us introduces us to different animals, people which takes us out of the strapping reality. In Abel Tadol there is an intentional lack of rationality as if I use it is pertinent to say it is not absolutely absent. Sense and coherence are there in these but in a different definition. If I use take a detail study of these poems with reference to socio-political context we get to know what Subraman Ray actually wants to convey the messages through his poems and in which manner he used to see his contemporary society and how critical of those who lacked nationalism and find pride in serving as slaves to the Britishers. In missing Bhickers we find Boss Babu is happy with his assumed identity

They are @ losing their congenial uniqueness, individually as they are trying to imitate the British. The relationship between lion and deer we see the essential dichotomy between the prey-predator relationship. They are chasing behind the alien culture by disregarding their native culture. This is what Ray @ criticizes about his society.

3) Tharley is like a sherpa who assists Pinton and Captain Haddock throughout their perilous journey. Though he was quite hesitant to help Pinton as he too believes that Chang could be dead and also in the middle of the hot he leaves Pinton's assistance and went back but what insists him to come back is by seeing Pinton's indomitable spirit and courage and faith in friendship to get back his friend Chang. What strikes him that being a white man if Pinton could relentlessly search for Chang who is a yellow man like Tharley. Why the Tharley can't help them to succeed in their @ journey. While he comes back, he also saves the life of Pinton and Captain Haddock from falling from the mountain. Without Tharley's assistance, Pinton could never have had saved his friend Chang.
